Jason Passe, 18, of Leominster, Massachusetts, is accused of raping two girls he met at a gay nightclub in 2015. A mental health evaluation of Passe suggests he is a pedophile, the Boston Globe reported. Despite his criminal history of sexual crimes, including a conviction for possession of child pornography, the report found that he is "a pedophile who sexually preys on minors," who poses a "very high risk to reoffend" if released, according to the medical report. Police say Passe forced one of the victims to perform oral sex on him, according to the report. He is being charged with two counts of rape of a person under age of 14 and is being held on $75,000 bail. The medical evaluation recommended that he be held in a prison facility that houses people serving time for sex crimes, because, according to the report, he is a pedophile who poses a "very high risk to reoffend." The evaluation also suggested he should not be placed in a prison that houses people serving time for violent crimes, and that Passe should be held in one that is "more preoccupied" with sex crimes. Passe's attorney, however, believes he should be tried as an adult because of the seriousness of the charges, and his involvement in the incident as the one who abducted the women and brought them to the apartment. The attorney, John S. Martland, said he wants prosecutors to charge Passe as an adult and that his client, "in the interest of justice," should have the right to enter a plea. Martland said "Jason is a juvenile and not a suitable subject for the adult court." The victims' families believe that Passe will continue to commit crimes, the Boston Herald f678ea9f9e
